THE SHADOW

Mission.

A communications career in higher education spans many disciplines and skill areas.

As a practitioner, you must combine elements of marketing, journalism, public relations, advertising, broadcasting and government relations. Add to this a mastery of changing technology, a deep-rooted understanding of the foundations of educational philosophy and a clear vision of your institution's goals – both today and tomorrow – and you have the qualities that make a career in higher education communications so dynamic and rewarding. While no institution is identical to yours, there are issues and challenges that communicators in an array of higher education settings have in common. The Tennessee College Public Relations Association exists to explore these commonalities.

Formed in 1975, TCPRA is an alliance of communicators who represent the colleges and universities, public and private, two-year technical schools, technology centers and community colleges that together define higher education in Tennessee.

2023 EDUCATION PRIORITIES

With these foundations in mind, SCORE recommends three key priorities for the state to focus on in 2023:

- Advance High-Quality Instruction For Every Student
- Address Tennessee's College-Going Decline With Urgency
- Prepare All Tennessee Students For Work

TCPRA

Increase the college-going rate for the high school class of 2023 to at least 60 percent.

Increase adult enrollment in higher education through Tennessee Reconnect participation.

Improve coordination and alignment in education and workforce training to ensure students have portable and stackable options for greater economic mobility.

Rebuilding Public Trust.

Many prospective students no longer connect the product of a college education with the outcome of a good job.

Higher Education's industry image issues are rooted in cost, stress from career uncertainty and lack of faith in payoff.

The Hero.

If there's a single area of alignment in this year's data, it's this: nearly every higher ed CMO in the US feels a pronounced degree of pressure from leadership, with inadequate budget and staffing resources to meet those very same demands.

And while budgets are increasing incrementally, the general feeling from many CMOs is that these gains are slowly correcting a long history of underfunding, rather than serving as strategic funding that matches existing or forward-facing leadership expectations.

1 in 4 CMOs

say their institution's investment in marketing is appropriate given the expectations of the marketing department and has the budget/staff needed to meet the expectations of leadership.

LARGE SCHOOL

"While our budget has grown under new leadership, it was really underfunded prior to that. We are making up for those gaps. The institutional goals are aspirational and will require a larger budget for marketing and communications to accomplish those goals."

Easier Said Than Done – Why Marketers Are Stuck on Channels

Marketers have a problem. As they face increased pressure from the C-suite, they're struggling to understand what the C-suite wants. Despite the clear need to evolve, marketers are stuck. Though, in theory, they know outcomes are important, channel-first habits die hard. agree that, compared to 2019, their department now focuses more on achieving overarching business objectives rather than activating channel-based KPIs and goals.

BUT ONLY

start with outcomes, then set specific channel activations and KPIs accordingly.

73%

still focus first on activating specific marketing channels and achieving KPIs, then connect metrics back to the outcomes.

TCPRA

Google Doesn't Know...

URL Entry/Bookmarks: 40-60%

This includes users who directly type the URL, access it from bookmarks, or use browser autocomplete. It often represents a significant portion of direct traffic, especially for wellknown brands.

Untagged Links: 20-30%

This includes clicks from emails, secure browsing transitions, and other sources where referrer information is lost or not properly passed.

Dark Social Sharing: 10-20%

While difficult to quantify, dark social sharing via messaging apps and private channels likely contributes a notable but often underestimated portion.

Technical Glitches: 5-10%

This encompasses instances where referrer data is misinterpreted or lost due to technical issues.

COLLEGE OF PHARMACY

The College of Pharmacy has held a longstanding partnership with the marketing team at Advance Education. They took the time to educate me on each digital advertising product, our funding levels across products, ideal timing for different strategies, and how to optimize our inputs to get the best results. They listened to our unique program position, strategies for the cycle, and program highlights in order to make tailored recommendations.

Each month, we review performance against industry benchmarks and make strategic adjustments. Their team allowed me to double the impact of our dollars spent and explore new markets that were cost prohibitive to recruit in person to. The team is quick to adapt strategies and create new content based on the campaign's performance metrics, ensuring effectiveness and maximum impact of our dollars.

I highly recommend Advance Education to any educational institution looking to redefine its marketing strategy and achieve unparalleled enrollment success.

For admissions offices, they are able to integrate directly into your needs and CRM without requiring digital marketing expertise. Here's to many more years of collaboration and triumphs!
